Welcome to the Kojonup Community

Kojonup is nestled amongst the beautiful Southwest of Western Australia and is a rich pastoral district of farmland and bush, three hours south of Perth with roughly 2000 people located within the Shire. Kojonup is known for its rich agricultural background, sporting culture and history.

The name Kojonup is believed to refer to the "Kodja" or stone axe made by Indigenous Australians, from the local stone.

The Noongar people are the traditional owners and inhabitants of Kojonup. Specifically, the Noongar people of Kojonup today are descendants of the Keneang tribe. Historically the Noongar people drank from the local freshwater spring and hunted game with the traditional Noongar 'kodj', or stone axe. Both Kojonup and The Kodja Place are named after the historically significant implement.
